We always adhere to the IAATO 5-meter rule regarding wildlife. However, the animals sometimes forget that rule and let their curiosity get the best of them.

You wake up that first morning, and you can't believe you're still on planet earth.

And then it hits you: there's nowhere on our planet that is more "planet earth" than Antarctica. Wild, unpopulated, unspoiled and ultimately, life-affirming. Even for someone like me, who's been to this continent dozens of times, that never changes. It's why I keep going back, even after two decades of doing this. There's simply no place — anywhere — that compares. And every visit is like the first time all over again. Incredible.

I hope you'll join us in exploring Antarctica in '22-'24. They promise to be two great seasons whether you're onboard our newest ship, Seaventure, or our beloved classic, Island Sky. As always, our intense focus will be on the continent itself, with every daily experience and onboard amenity designed to uncover the secrets of this mysterious place, and to maximize your opportunity to fully engage with your inner explorer.

I hope to see you on board.

We are all explorers

From the moment we're born, we're born to explore — devouring the incredible world around us, seeing, touching, feeling ... looking for any and every way to indulge our boundless curiosity. Adulthood and the distractions of modern life have a way of making us forget that.

Antarctica has a way of making us remember.

At Polar Latitudes, everything we do, we do with a spirit of exploration in our hearts, and with Antarctica front and center in our minds. When you journey with us into this wild and untamed place, you become more than a traveler; you become, once again, an explorer — in every sense of the word.

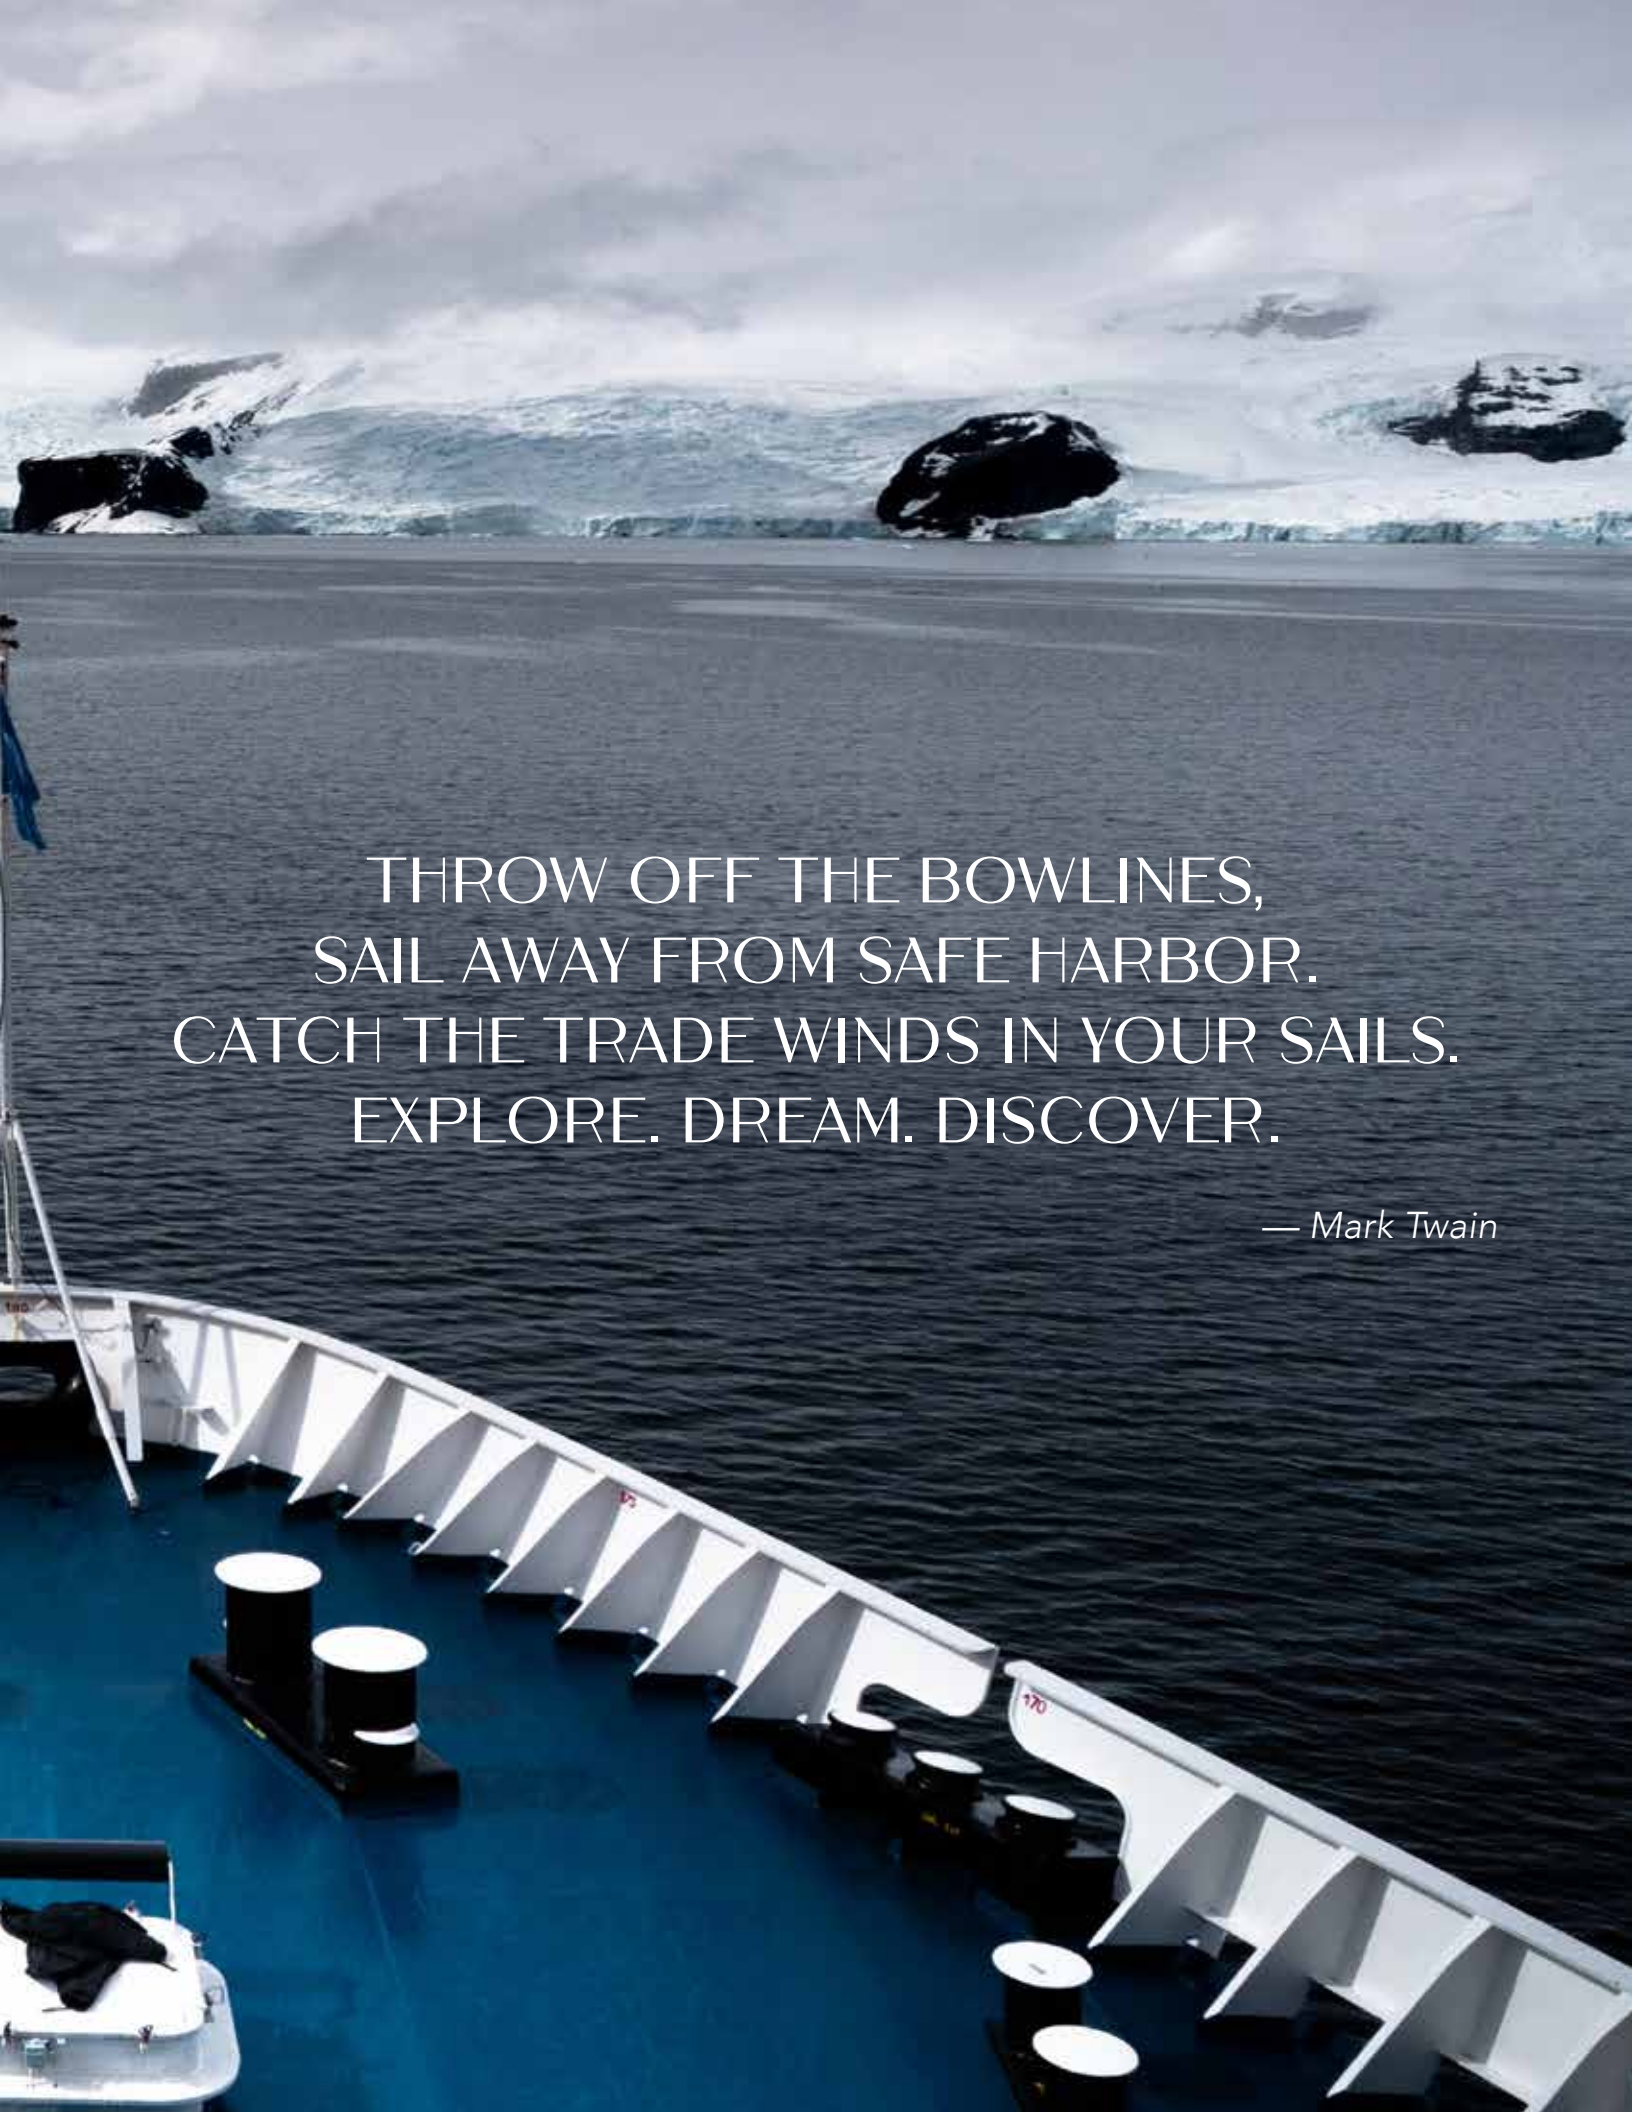

Our small ship experience will bring you up close and personal with Antarctica's ethereal landscape and awe-inspiring wildlife, as so-called "civilized" life fades away, overtaken by a spirit of improvisation and boundless discovery. Each day, we'll seek out unique opportunities, whenever and wherever Antarctica offers them to us. And our team is chosen for both their technical skill and their highly infectious passion, so be prepared to fall in love with this one-of-a-kind place.

Our ships emphasize a range of amenities that enhance and enrich — rather than detract from — the Antarctic experience. Since the term "cookie-cutter" doesn't exist in our vocabulary, each ship brings its own personality to the experience, which you can read about later in the brochure. What they won't be bringing? Some of the glitzy toys and constant onboard diversions that a few other ships will be carrying into Antarctic waters. That's by design.

On a Polar Latitudes voyage, we are all explorers. And what explorers come to Antarctica for is Antarctica. Why would anyone want to be diverted from that?

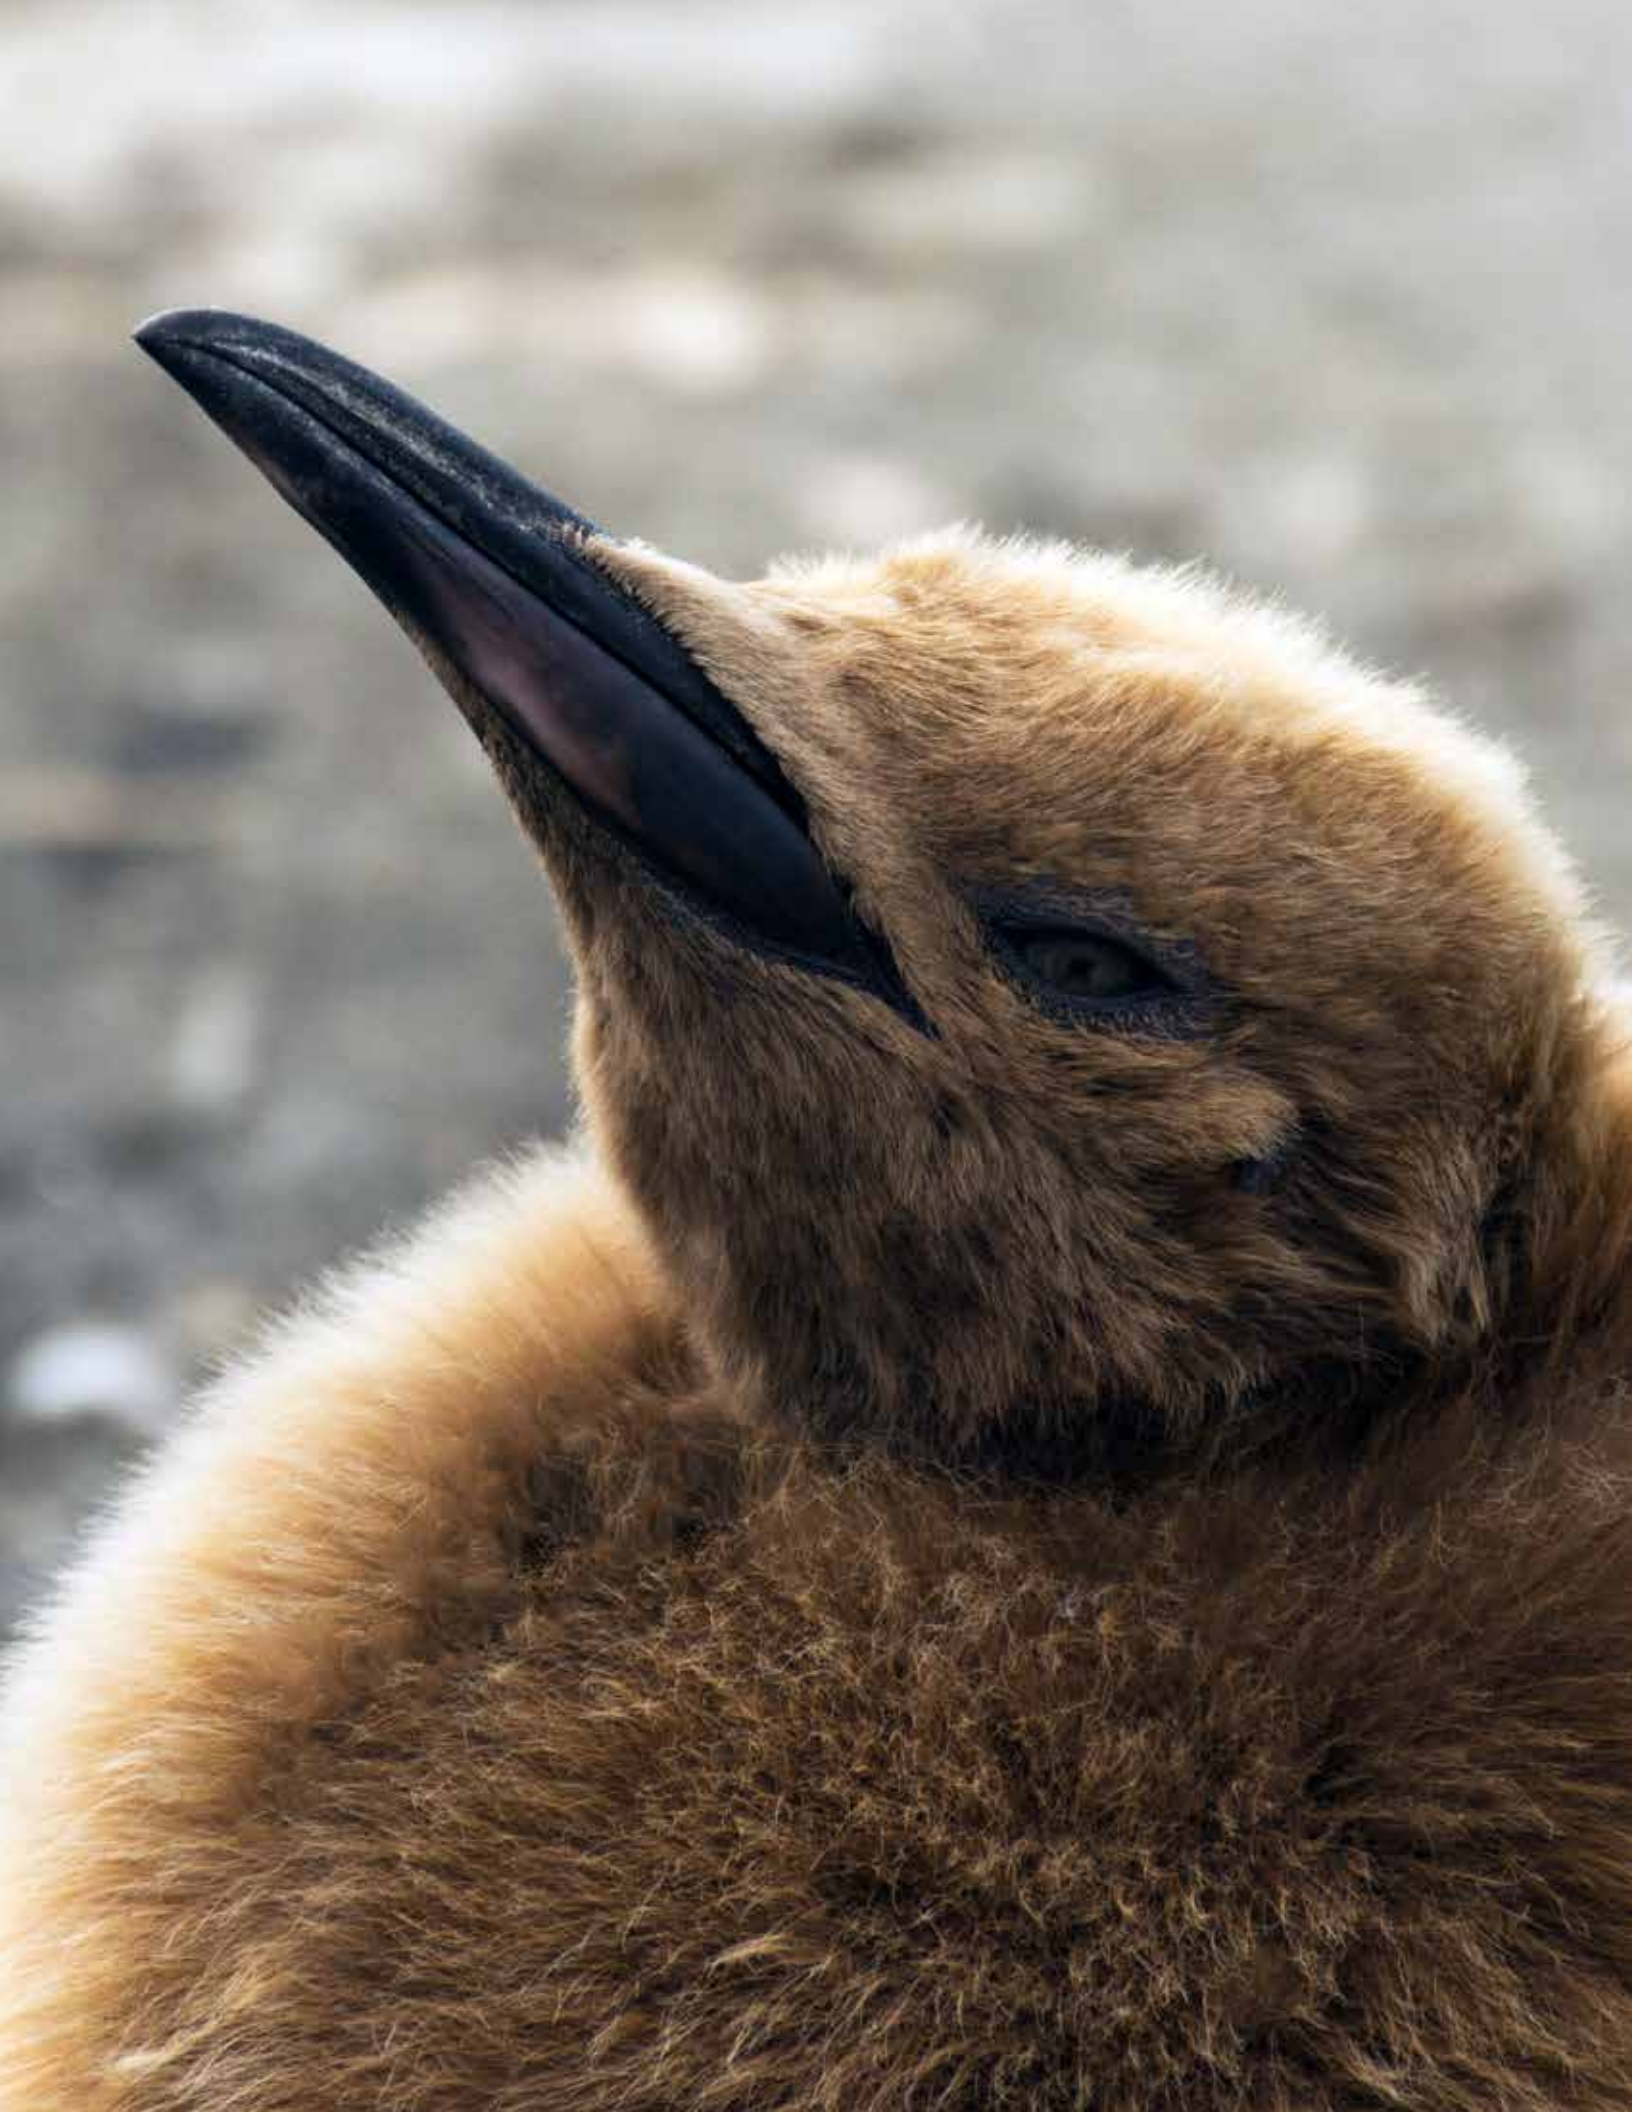

Join us on the trip of a lifetime. Indulge the inner explorer in you, as you discover the last wild, unpopulated, undisturbed place on planet Earth. Along the way, you might even discover yourself.

THROW OFF THE BOWLINES,
SAIL AWAY FROM SAFE HARBOR.
CATCH THE TRADE WINDS IN YOUR SAILS.
EXPLORE. DREAM. DISCOVER.

Our penguins are cuter than their penguins

That sounds ridiculous because it is. And therein lies the difficulty in deciding which Antarctica-bound travel company to trust with your bucket list holiday. Browsing through websites, the similarities are hard to miss: photos of majestic icebergs and incredible wildlife (including universally cute penguins) assurances of highly experienced onboard staff and expedition teams, first class food and accommodations and, of course, a strong emphasis on safety. But if all that is true (and for the most part it is), how does one decide? Well, here are five things that are of particular importance to us. If they're important to you too, then we'll see you on board.

1 We only travel to Antarctica. And we've been doing it for decades. It's what we love, and we don't share that love with a dozen other places around the world. When people travel with us, they feel that passion, and they benefit from our deep knowledge of a continent unlike any other.

2 We are founder owned and operated. We are not a gleam in the eye of a hedge-fund manager, and we are not part of a giant hospitality operation. We do this because we couldn't imagine doing anything else. You may even see one of our owners on board, or guiding you on your next Zodiac adventure.

3 We offer a small ship, highly-personalized experience. There's no "herding," no early and late dinner shifts, no endless waiting for your turn to board a Zodiac. On a Polar Latitudes voyage, we're all one team, and Antarctica is an intimate, personalized experience we share together.

4 You'll feel like family. We hear this all the time from departing passengers, and we love it. On board, you're not just a passenger, you're a fellow explorer. Your dinner tablemates might be expedition leaders, photography coaches, our whale-tracking partners from Woods Hole, or even our President, who still travels with us several times a year. By the end of your journey, you'll know us by name, and you may even make some new friends for life.

5 Our staff is better than just great; they're engaging. We believe our staff, top to bottom, is the most experienced, most skilled team in Antarctica. But we also hire for the things that don't appear on most resumes. A passion for exploration. A desire to be part of a team. Fun to be around. And a love for passing their love of this incredible place on to everyone around them. When an expedition team is out of sync (and it happens) it's not just bad for them, it's bad for you, too.

The Polar Latitudes S.H.I.E.L.D.

POLAR LATITUDES

We understand that even as the world opens up, health remains a lingering concern and therefore for us, it will continue to be a major priority. To ensure the safety of everyone on board – while maximizing your once-in-a-lifetime Antarctic experience – we will be instituting what we’re calling The Polar Latitudes S.H.I.E.L.D., a deep and multi-faceted program developed by our team of medical and operations specialists, with guidance from the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and the World Health Organization (WHO). Here’s what our S.H.I.E.L.D. currently entails, though some details may change.

S – Science-Based. All our policies and procedures, from pre-departure to disembarkation, are made with the guidance of the best currently available medical and scientific information from around the globe. Should the data and science evolve, so too will our protocols.

H – Health and Safety First. Every decision we’ve made and will continue to make, places the health and safety of our entire PL family as number one. All crew members, from captain to kitchen staff, will be trained on the latest Covid safety protocols.

I – Immunizations. Everyone on board must be fully vaccinated with documentation issued by the vaccinating authority. Seasonal flu shots are also recommended, to avoid any confusion regarding symptoms.

E – Evaluating and Testing. Every traveler must provide documentation of a recent negative Covid test before joining the group, and travelers will be re-tested upon arrival at our hotel. If deemed necessary, a third test may be administered upon boarding.

L – Layers of Protection On Board. Upgraded ventilation systems will provide circulating fresh air in each cabin, and all other onboard spaces will be sanitized nightly. The layout and passenger capacity of Seaventure allows for easy social distancing, and hand sanitizer stations will always be within easy reach.

D – Dedicated to Your Experience. The Polar Latitudes S.H.I.E.L.D. is designed to keep you safe and put your mind at ease, while making only the slightest – and hardly noticeable – program changes. Once we set out for Antarctica, rest assured your entire focus will turn to the penguins, whales, spectacular panoramic vistas and, of course, that very first iceberg sighting.

The story (and the enduring presence) of Sir Ernest Shackleton

In 1917, Sir Ernest Shackleton and a small, desperate crew embarked on what is widely recognized as the greatest survival and rescue story in Antarctic (or any!) history. Shackleton's quest to cross Antarctica aboard the expedition ship Endurance ended when the ship and its crew were frozen in place by encroaching pack ice. Eight months later, the ship was crushed and its crew forced to make a go of it on sea ice that was literally shifting under their feet. For another four months, they survived on little more than penguin and seal meat, before Shackleton and five crew members set sail in a tiny lifeboat across 720 nautical miles from Elephant Island to South Georgia, through hurricane winds and 50-foot waves – with nothing to guide them but the sun, the horizon, a few rudimentary tools, and whatever luck the gods might grant them. Miraculously, they not only made it, but Shackleton did not give up having made four attempts at rescuing the remaining shipmates who had survived an additional four months on Elephant Island. By the time the entire Endurance crew were reunited, not a single man died over the course of the two year harrowing experience.

To explore Antarctica is to feel Shackleton's presence, even to this day.

Ernest Shackleton

BEAUTY AND SEDUCTION, I BELIEVE,
IS NATURE'S TOOL FOR SURVIVAL,
BECAUSE WE WILL PROTECT WHAT WE FALL IN LOVE WITH.

— Louie Schwartzberg

We come to explore. We also come to protect.

As our co-founder John McKeon is fond of saying, no one will fight to protect what they've never even seen. Conversely, to see Antarctica is to love it, to be moved by it, to want to preserve it. So, we view every journey as an opportunity to send back into the "real world" 100-plus advocates for this incredible – and incredibly still wild – place. It's why we host world-renowned climate scientists from institutions like Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, why we were the first Antarctic travel company to have a Citizen Science Program on board every voyage, and why we were proud to host Homeward Bound - a worldwide Woman's Leadership in Science program.

From minimizing fuel consumption per passenger, to updating our waste management systems to the highest standards possible, to the tiniest details like issuing every passenger a reusable water bottle, we are committed to protecting the last wild place on earth, and inspiring others to do the same.

Polar Latitudes Citizen Science Program

Citizen Science is a way to harness the power of travelers to observe, record, and report on natural phenomena. This is particularly helpful in the Antarctic, where it is challenging to support long-term academic observation teams.

Guests on Polar Latitudes voyages are invited to participate in data-gathering activities that support major research projects. The data we collect contributes to a better understanding of Antarctica's unique ecology and changing climate.

Our new ship Seaventure will boast a brand new science lab! The lab will serve as a home base to visiting scientists on board and enhance participation in our citizen science programs.

The projects offered may vary slightly by voyage. If you are interested in participating please see the onboard daily bulletin and join the scheduled Citizen Science Introduction Meeting at the start of your voyage. There is no additional cost to participate.

Polar Latitudes Citizen Science Projects

SEABIRD SURVEYS

Providing data for Stony Brook University

We complete at-sea and on-shore bird surveys for Stony Brook University to study the distribution, population status, and breeding events of birds in the Southern Ocean and along the Antarctic Peninsula.

CLOUD OBSERVATIONS

Providing data for NASA Globe Observer

By observing and recording cloud cover & type timed to NASA satellite fly-overs, we can help scientists understand how surface and air temperature are affected by cloud cover, and how clouds will respond to a changing climate as well.

Water Sampling for the Scripps Institution of Oceanography

SALP PROJECT

Providing data for Alfred Wegener Institute

Salp are free-swimming invertebrates that feed on phytoplankton. We will collect baseline data of Salp distribution around our landing sites and also collect a few specimens for genetic species determination. There has been a recent increase in Salp abundance on a circumpolar scale around Antarctica. The data we collect will help scientists of the Alfred Wegener Institute explore how this might be linked to a changing climate.

SOUTHERN OCEAN WATER SAMPLING

Providing data for the Scripps Institution of Oceanography

We will be measuring the surface water temperature and salinity during sea days on crossings between Ushuaia and the Peninsula, as well as between South Georgia and the Peninsula for the Scripps Institution of Oceanography. The data we collect contributes to a study of the long-term temperature and salinity trends of the Southern Ocean.

FJORDPHYTO – PHYTOPLANKTON

Providing data for the Scripps Institution of Oceanography

By collecting phytoplankton samples in fjord systems along the Antarctic Peninsula, we help scientists at the Scripps Institution of Oceanography obtain a seasonal picture of phytoplankton abundance, composition, and distribution throughout the growth season (from October to March), as well as how phytoplankton are influenced by (increasing) melt-water inflow from glaciers.

MARINE MAMMAL IDENTIFICATION

Providing data for Happy Whale

We photograph unique identifiable markings on a whale's fluke (tail) and dorsal fin, which allows Happy Whale to non-invasively track whale movements over time. By focusing on whales, we bring attention to the marine ecosystem as a whole and the challenges we face as a global community.

Take your photography to the next level

A professional coach for every camera and skill level

Shooting photographs in Antarctica is a unique privilege ... and also a unique challenge. The weather and lighting conditions can change dramatically in a matter of minutes, and an incredible opportunity can present itself at any moment. When you do capture that unexpected wildlife encounter, or the spectacular Antarctic landscape just as the sun is setting it ablaze, you've preserved a moment on earth that few people will ever get to see — unless they're lucky enough to follow you on Instagram.

Our professional photography coaches are here to help you make the most of every photo opportunity, whether you're a fully equipped landscape photographer or someone armed only with a cellphone camera and an unlimited love of nature and beautiful imagery. From basic instruction, to the best way to shoot from a moving Zodiac, to the complexities of handling the very tricky relationship between snow, ice and Antarctica's ever-shifting light, our coaches have mastered every kind of situation this environment and its inhabitants can place in your lens' path. They'll show you how to make the most of every opportunity.

Presentations and briefings will help you better understand your camera, learn a few tricks of the trade, and better master the day's unpredictable weather and environment. Your coach is with you in the field — sometimes accompanying you in a Zodiac, with you on a shore landing, or sitting at the table next to you at dinner, ready and willing to answer any question, or pass along an inside tip earned through years of experience in Antarctic waters. Don't hesitate to ask!

At the end of each trip, passengers are invited to submit photos to our on-board photo contest. Finalists are selected by our photography coach, and winners chosen by the cheers, "oohs" and "aahs" of fellow passengers at a festive event in our lounge.

The photography coach is also our trip's documentary photographer, capturing the expedition's many highlights, which are shared at an event at the end of your voyage, and given to each passenger as a valued keepsake.

More about our photography coaches.

Our coaches are experienced professionals with a wide range of specialties and skills. While their backgrounds vary, their passion for the outdoors and Antarctica in particular is a common thread they share. They are deeply knowledgeable of cameras and film equipment of every kind, and take great joy in sharing their knowledge with photographers of every level of experience.

The Antarctic Shackleton Challenge with Lou Rudd

Polar Latitudes is proud to host The Antarctic Challenge as a part of Shackleton London's Polar Quest expedition series, all of which will be led by world-renowned explorer and former SAS soldier, Louis Rudd MBE.

These off-the-grid explorations will use Polar Latitudes' ships as the platform for the Challenge, during which Lou will take ten Polar Latitudes passengers deep into the Antarctic continent for three days, (two nights) of traverse skiing, camping and Antarctic survival training. It's a chance to challenge yourself, and see an Antarctica that few will ever experience. Participation will require a moderate level of fitness and wealth of adventurer's spirit.

Departure dates are to be announced soon. If you'd like to receive updates, please subscribe to our newsletter.

There are many ways to explore Lou Rudd has accomplished them all

Louis Rudd, Director of Expeditions at Shackleton London, virtually defines the word "explorer." He is a record-breaking polar adventurer, expedition leader, former Royal Marine Commando and SAS soldier, with 34 years of service. He is the first - and - only - person to have traversed Antarctica twice using only human power, and he's reached the South Pole three times from different coastal start points. Needless to say, to journey into the heart of Antarctica in the hands of Lou Rudd is to be in the best, most accomplished hands imaginable.

An expedition jacket designed by Antarctica, for Antarctica

When you travel to a place for ten years, you come to learn a few things about it. And when that place is Antarctica, you learn that it's best to be wearing an expedition jacket that can withstand this unpredictable and unforgiving environment. Our new jacket, designed in collaboration with Shackleton London, is lightweight, waterproof, and wind resistant. It hugs the body, is both warm and breathable, and features an extra-high collar and extra-long bottom in the back, to keep the chill and sea mist from ever sneaking up or down your spine. We added plenty of sturdy loops to secure gloves, a waterbottle, or a set of keys, ensuring that nothing goes overboard. We included a clear pocket on the sleeve that displays your passenger ID card, so you never have to fumble for it while leaving or boarding the ship. And waterproof inside pockets will keep your personal items dry and safe at all times. It's a jacket that can go toe-to-toe with Antarctica's challenging environment, keeping you warm, dry, safe, and incident free. We supply this jacket to everyone who travels with us. It's yours to keep, and will provide exceptional service for years – if not decades – to come, wherever your exploration may take you.

Exploring Antarctica aboard the MS Seaventure

Seaventure features a 1-A Super ice class rating — the highest ice class awarded to passenger vessels, allowing us to explore coves, bays, and channels that would have previously been forbidden to us.

The ship also offers a host of new features & activities. There's a sauna, a fitness center, a custom-built citizen science lab, and a heated saltwater pool. Common areas are large and beautifully appointed, and the ship has two kitchens, one on the Lido deck for al fresco dining when weather permits. There is plenty of storage space, so we can carry more equipment, allowing more of our guests to participate in activities like kayaking, snowshoeing, and camping.

Exploring Antarctica aboard the Island Sky

Polar Latitudes began operating voyages aboard Island Sky in December of 2017. Guests who traveled aboard her over the ensuing four years gave her top ratings as a fantastic platform for exploring Antarctica in comfort and style. It's not just that she exudes old world charm, she is also one of the few ships in her class that boasts 3 decks of suites with sliding-glass doors, offering guests immediate access to Antarctica from the privacy of their suite.

We're thrilled to have her back again beginning in December of 2022! We have always been committed to giving our guests an up-close and personal small-ship Antarctic experience, and that is exactly what Island Sky delivers.
